INSIDE: ALL THE LATEST CD32 NEWS AND REVIEWS

The PlayStation in particular has some stunning games. Sega Rally and Virtua Cop on Saturn are good but the machine is struggling for recognition ahead of Sony's beast. What relevance has this to the world of CD32 you may ask. Just bear with me and I'll get to the point. Many of the PlayStation's early releases seemed more concerned with demonstrating the machine's capabilities with playability further down the agenda. Games like Wipeout and Lone Soldier look gorgeous, but where's the fun. Admittedly Destruction Derby is an excellent driving game but most, for all their glorious visuals fail to engage the player beyond superficial involvement.

However the latest batch of titles include point n' click adventures and platformers of all things. It just goes to show that no matter what the technology, the classic elements of playability remain the same. The next gen stuff has only been around for a few months and already programmers are waking up to this, which is good news for anyone with an interest in video gaming.

cid Software are looking to back-up the phenomenal success of Super Skidmarks (rated a roaring 92% back in issue II) with the release of a set of Data disks. Featuring new tracks, new championships and new levels of competition, the disks are a must for all fans of this eccentric, but brilliant racing game.

Unfortunately, being CD32 owners the data disks will be absolutely no use to us at all, although anyone with an SXI expansion unit should be okay. So, yet again, CD32 owners find themselves being punished for being the stalwarts and pioneers of true 32 bit gaming. I dunno, life sucks!

The World of Amiga

o herald the rebirth of the Amiga and as a symbol of their commitment to its future, Amiga Technologies are hosting a morale boosting show at the Novotel Exhibition Centre. Running on the 13th and 14th of April, the show will provide centre stage for all the latest and greatest Amiga releases, plus all the software that was put on hold over recent months, whilst the Commodore fiasco was being resolved.

Apart from the software, the show will also feature an arcade corner, dozens of fantastic competitions (with some great prizes up for grabs), a retail area, presentation theatre and all the latest high-tech applications.

The World of Amiga show promises to provide an interesting day out for all the family and with £100's worth of offers and savings available, it should be good for the wallet too.

Tickets are priced at a modest

£7 for adults and £5.50 for children and can be booked in advance on the credit card hotline - 01369 706346.

The .NET result is a surfer's paradise espite a hugely successful relaunch, the A1200 failed to meet the sales targets set by Amiga Technologies, increasing doubts within the industry about the firm's marketing strategy. By bundling the machine with more serious (techy) software and pricing the machine at £399, AT seem to have made several key mistakes. Firstly they ignored one of the machines main selling points that, as a games machine, the A1200 has one of the most extensive software libraries in existence. Also, for just a couple of £100 more, computer eggheads could get a more-than-adequate PC.

AT seem to be hitting the right note now though, with a new A1200 package that aims to take full advantage of the current Internet boom. Called the Surfer's pack, the package includes a 14.4 modem, plus internet software and a 260 Mb hard drive. Selling at around the £600 mark though, the price tag looks likely to remain as contentious as ever.

ore intelligent readers of CD32 Gamer may have noticed the disappearance of the CD contents page within the last few months. This was due to the unpredictable nature of the cover CD's contents and hence made the pages themselves unreliable. The pages have to be written, designed and printed well in advance of the on-sale date whereas the CDs are often left hanging to the last minute. So, not wanting to waste the pages, it was decided to remove them from the mag and use the space for an extra review, or something. Unfortunately, out with the pages went our ever-present acknowledgement to Multi Media Machine for all the hard work they put into getting the CD sorted. Sory about that lads. We'd lust like to take this opportunity to pass on our eternal gratitude for all your efforts.

MMM, who have a vast collection of PD, Shareware and demo software compilations, can be contacted on 01204 383688 and are always on the lookout for new stuff, so go on, give them a call!

ELECTRONIC ARTS TAKE TOP SPOT

EA took the title of top UK publisher last year (in terms of revenue) by pipping Virgin Interactive Entertainment by 0.8% - perhaps if VIE had released a few titles on the CD32, they might just have won top spot themselves!

Whilst the two giants of the software industry slugged it out for first place, Ocean sneaked into an impressive sixth place. This was thanks largely to the success of Worms and their dedication to publishing on all formats, including the CD32. Maybe the other companies will learn from their success? Well, you can but hope!

ECTS TO BECOME ANNUAL EVENT

Despite the huge success of the twice-annual ECTS show, the organisers, Blenheim, have announced that from '97 there could only be one a year. This comes in response to exhibitors claims that a single show would focus attention more and, in the long run, serve to strengthen the shows lasting appeal. Nothing to do with it being cheaper, eh?

SX-32 CARD RELEASE

This month sees the surprise release of the SX-32 card from Power Computing Ltd. Big brother to the SX-1 unit, the SX-32 siots inside the CD32. It adds various ports to your machine including ones for VGA, RGB, parallel, serial and an external disk drive. (Very handy!) It also comes with a clock and controller for the addition of a hard drive as standard. On the circuit board, Power Computing have also included a simms socket for adding extra memory — enabling you to take your CD32 up to an amazing 10 Meg! The most astounding thing about the SX-32 though, is that you get all this for under 200 smackers!

For more news about the revolutionary SX-32 card, call Lesley Jordan on 0402 116342.

Watchtower

OTM continue their support for the CD32, with the forthcoming release of their Commando style shoot-'em-up, Watchtower.

For anyone who's never heard of Commando, let me tell you it was THE arcade shoot-'em-up of the 80's. You can forget Ikari Warriors and Rambo, Commando was king — loads of blood splattered levels, bombs and explosions galore and a cool theme tune to boot. Top stuff and now OTM are looking to bring it back into the 90's under the cunning guise of Watchtower.

Unlike Commando, Watchtower allows for full, 360° rotational movement — players being able to roam from side-to-side, as well as up and down. It pays to investigate every nook and cranny too, as there's plenty of health boosts, points bonuses and weapons to find.

With three difficulty settings and six extremely long missions, Watchtower ought to have something to offer gamers of all standards. From wimps who like things nice and easy, to the mega-tough psycho killers who like their games rock hard.

Best of all, two-player simultaneous mode could be the bizz! Join forces to blast away the massive army of enemy that stand before you and victory.

If the namby pamby approach fails a few grenades are a sure fire way of livening things up.

Talking of the bad guys, OTM promise the largest array of enemies and vehicles the CD32 has ever seen — easily beating the Alien Breed games. The diversity of resistance is equally remarkable. Watchtower's enemies have differing behavioural patterns forcing players to be extra vigilant.

OTM have placed the emphasis on gameplay, not aesthetics. Commando was just the same — it looked average, but played exceedingly well.

Watch out for the bunkers as their armour is impervious to your machine gun fire. Stock up with the heavy artillery to take them out.

OTM are rapidly making a name for themselves amongst CD32 owners, not only for their continued support during these troubled times, but for the quality of their products. Although they're yet to win an esteemed Gamer Gold, Virtual Karting came close this month (84%) and Watchtower could go closer still. Wait until next month when we'll give you the full beef.

We gave CD32 Gamer contributor and all-round Amiga-guru Paul Wootton five hours on the Net to come up with anything CD32. Go for it, Paul!

challenge, eh? Yeah, I'll give it a whirl. I've only got five hours, though! I've only got a 14,400 modem at the moment, and my Amiga crashes every five minutes so I may be pushed for time. Five hours may seem to be a long time to spend on the phone, but I can't help it. Most of my time will be spent waiting for connections, just like the average user. I'll be using my home setup of an Amiga 1200, 6Mb RAM, 14,400 Supra modem, Mosaic, IBrowse and an ordinary phone line.

Most of the gear there you will all know about but, for those of you who are unfamiliar with InterNet stuff, Mosaic is the standard Amiga interface for viewing the World Wide Web. It will display the pictures, text and plays the relevant sound from each page you access. IBrowse is made by the same people and although only available in a beta/demo version, it is already a lot better and faster than mosaic.

So, with five hours looming ahead, I wondered how many people who have expanded their CD32s. or also use an Amiga as well, have tried getting around the Net. Why don't you

The Amiga Tech page which proved no more fruitful than the Escom pages if the truth be known.

The World Wide Web is the largest source of information ever accumulated in the history of man. If you want to know something, chances are it's somewhere on the Net!

All the big companies have their own websites. In the case of software publishers these will give you access to info on forthcoming games, screenshots and even demos if you're lucky. It's a shame the Escom site doesn't contain more Amiga stuff though.

write and tell us and give the ACG crew some addresses of good sites. Well, for those of you who are thinking about it, I'll see what I can come up with in the mean-time.

I fired up the machine, ran my setup scripts, logged on and Mosaic started. Firstly, I decided to go into Webcrawler and do a search for 'CD32'. It started looking around the Web and then locked up. Reset time! Crash number one, and I've only been here two minutes!

I started it all again, but this time I thought I'd go straight for the Amiga Technologies page. I know they have a small amount of stuff on the CD32. That might be cheating a little, but you have to go with what you know. This is a good page for general information about what's happening in the Amiga world but, like I said, there's only a small amount of CD32 stuff. Still, there's four-odd hours to go and I've hardly touched the surface.

With a link from their page, I tried the 'Amiga User Dir'. This is just a list of people using Amigas on the Net. However, looking down the list, quite a few of them have CD32s as well so I tried some of them. I went to Sweden, Norfolk, Canada and a couple of other places but none of them were very interesting.

I know — I'll try the Team17 site. Worms is out on CD so maybe I can find something there. I got to the Home page for their site and picked the 'Welcome' option. As soon as I clicked the mouse, guess what happened? Yep, crash number two! I think I might come back to this one later.

The next thing I thought I'd try is the UK Directory, afterall, the CD32 sold well in England and Europe. There's bound to be some CD32 items around. I linked through and tried everything; UK dir — Computers — Viking — Amigas gave me nothing. UK dir — Computers — Multimedia — Amiga. Again, nothing to be found.

UK Dir — News — Magazines, this pointed to a couple of rival Amiga publishers while UK Dir — News — Magazines On-line revealed a couple of attempts at publishing on the Net. There were quite a few mentions of the CD32 and software in here. The only trouble was nearly all the 'issues' were dated around 1994. I couldn't find anything more recent. Some reviews were very short (four or five lines) and it was all text; not a picture to be seen anywhere! Some of it was quite interesting though.

Eventually, I left them back in the depths of time and attempted to get on one of the professional magazines' Web sites. My attempts were futile. I kept getting a message saying 'Error... cannot connect or refusing to serve you...'

I've seen this loads of time before. It just means that for some reason the line can't connect to the destination host, or the destination is very busy and you'll have to wait to get in. It can also mean that the page has actually moved to a new location. If it hasn't moved you can try again later on.

I tried another publisher (one of the biggest in computer mags). I was shocked to discover that you now need a password to get onto their pages! Anyway, after several error messages I got there and was just about to have a look around when it happened again — crash number three! Two hours into the challenge and I haven't got much. I'm going to take a break for a while I think...

I've lost track of the amount of time this thing's crashed on me now so I won't bore you with it. I don't normally spend this much time on the Net in one go. It's become quite frustrating jumping from one location to another after anything with even a hint of 'CD' in the name. Most of them are a waste of time, but after a long search I did find a couple of intriguing devices for expanding your CD32.

The first was in Finland (see box for address), about the SX-32 (See news report — Miles) expansion that fits inside your CD32 where the FMV cartridge would go. This turns your machine up to a full Amiga 1200 with CD drive! Very interesting. However, there was no date on the page so I couldn't tell how old the article was.

The second site was in Canada (see box for address). This was about the Pro Module expansion which seems to be a replacement for the now-defunct SX-I. Its advantage is that it keeps the FMV port free. The last update for this page was in January '96, so maybe it'll make it into the market place sometime soon. Keep an eye out for it.

you race and destroy other cars you get to go for big money becauses by absoring or running abors of ours, and every kill you make rewests you with a voice informing you of a "Readkill"

These two alone, in my opinion, were worth the time I spent looking for them. If either them become a reality, it'll breath new life into our old CD32s. I also found some CD32 features on the Mosaic originators pages (Omnipresence) which seems like a good site to keep in your address book.

My time's up now. Although I've found some useful addresses and pages, it's taken a long time to find anything specifically aimed at the CD32. Don't get me wrong, however; there's quite a lot to be found out there but it is very difficult to find. Perseverance is definitely the name of the game, and if you only spend an hour or so on the Net at a time you'd be hard pushed to uncover anything fruitful without some sort of guide.

What we've been talking about here is 'News Groups' and 'E-Mail'. If you are on the Web then you can probably send E-Mail on the Net as well as download news. This enables you to join a News Group and see what people have to say on a myriad of subjects. You could also E-Mail someone who's as interested in the CD32 as you are. You never know; they may have found some sites and pages that you didn't even know existed and therefore allowing you to get the information you want without eating up so much time.

I don't think I've wasted my time here. It was a fairly specialised subject to look for, especially in such a short time and without the help of the New Groups or E-Mail, it was going to be a difficult task right from the start. Finding the two expansion modules was nice, and they're something I'll be keeping an eye on. I'll let you know what happens.

Thanks Paul. We didn't think you could do it. I guess we'll just have to come up summat even more challenging next month, eh!

CD Review /

Whenever a game arrives through the ACG letterbox without us having to ask for it (none of that messy business chasing up PR people, making threatening phone calls or writing last minute reviews), the programmers, publishers and the game itself immediately gain our respect. Unfortunately, it makes our job all the more harder when it turns out to be a pile of rubbish!

very so often, the gaming world is treated to something so new and unique that it revolutionises a particular genre of game and sets a trend for years to come. Street Fighter, for example, did this for beat-em-ups, and Doom did it for shoot-'em-ups. Mario Kart also did it (although to a lesser extent) for racing games - its blend of fast-paced action and enthralling playability (with a few wicked power-ups thrown in for good measure) stirring what had become an increasingly stagnant genre of game. As a result of its success, the inevitable clones exploded on to nearly every format. Even the CD32 joined in on the act, courtesy of Grandslam and Bump 'n Burn. Now Black Magic have also entered the circuit with their own clone, Xtreme Racing.

Loading up the game for the first time, the immediate impression is Yep! Extra special thanks go to Ted Bailey for being, err, Ted Bailey I guess. Alright, I know it's a terrible caption, but you try writing something for a screen shot like this. Its not ruddy easy, I can tell you!

that it's clear and well presented, but somewhat bland and unimaginative. Now judging a game from the options screen is hardly a smart thing to do (don't judge a book by its cover and all that), but it can also be argued that first impressions last.

Off they go into a glorious turquoise sunset. Typical isn't it? The kind of picture-postcard scene which should be enjoyed in perfect silence. A marvel of nature spoilt by the sound of revving engines, exhaust fumes and a vast amount of swearing as you career off the track at the first bend!

They're a motley bunch, the Xtreme Racing clan. A Terminator look-a-like, a Policeman and a skateboarder. That second guy from the left obviously has some serious skin disorder so I'd keep out of his way!

Extreme Racing

In case your wondering, this is the screen that greets you should you select the Deathmatch option. The clue's right there in the screenshot. As the game tries to emulate SNES Super Mariokart, this is equivalent to SM's battle mode.

Whatever anybody's first impressions may be, nobody can argue that Xtreme Racing lacks depth because the wealth of options is quite staggering. The enormity only really hits you after a few games and just when you think you've seen it all, you realise you've just skimmed the surface.

The first option you face is the number of players. Thanks to a split screen, two players can join in on the action at the same time. After this, you get the choice of playing a single race, a season, competing for the Cup, or if there's more than one player, the Death Match. For the beginner the single race is a perfect opportunity to practice against some quality opposition, although, if you prefer, you can choose to race on your own.

Once you've got a few wins under your belt and honed your driving skills, the Cup and Season options offer a bigger challenge. This involves racing over every single track with points being dished out for finishing inside the top six. Whilst split screen mode. Sadly, it makes the already confusing graphics even harder to make out. Even so, the Death Match option is a good idea for when you get bored of endlessly lapping the computer opposition. It's always more satisfying beating your mates.

Two-payer action in

The track becomes lost in a watery wasteland. It's a good idea to follow the computer cars around for the first lap so you gain a rough idea of where the hell you're supposed to be going.

CD Review/

'The wealth of options and diversity in challenge offered by Xtreme Racing is truly commendable, unfortunately all that good work is let down by the graphics.'

Season option, but players are chucked out of the game if they don't finish high enough up in the placings.

All of the options in the game provide different levels of challenge and amusement depending on the skill of the player. The best way to play the game though, no matter how good or bad a racer you are, is in the Death Match mode. This isn't about racing, it's about survival. You and your friends battle it out in a gripping head-to-head battle where only one player survives. The sole aim of the game is to kill your opponent a predetermined number of times before he kills you.

If you're not familiar with Mario Kart or Bump 'n Burn, then you're probably wondering how you kill an opponent in a racing game. Well, Xtreme Racing features several different power-ups that can be collected this may sound easy, the computer opponents are more than equal to the challenge and provide some stern opposition.

Is that the same Brad responsible for designing CD32 Gamer? It can't be because he's dissapeared off on holiday!

To achieve any notable success over the season, players will have to accumulate money for some engine, tyre and brake boosts. Adding this 'shop' aspect instills a certain amount of tactics into the game, although it's nothing too taxing really. The Cup is similar in many ways to the Player two checks out the attractive local fauna. If only he had the foresight to check his rear view mirror he'd notice player one looming up behind with him with some high-explosives at the ready. Maybe he should remember the stuff he learnt in his driving lessons. You know, that 'Mirror, signal, move' stuff that you never use.

by driving over the question mark icons on the track. These can then be targeted at your opponents in the hope of destroying them. Watch out though - they in turn can try to destroy you. If you are killed, you lose valuable time and to make things worse, you lose any power-ups you may have collected.

Accompanying the four modes of play there's over 20 different tracks

It's supposed to be a race, right? Stopping to pick up hitchers might be considerate and humane thing to do but it isn't going to win you any friends back at team HQ. Now get back on the track and try to concentrate on the job in hand.

Oh dear. Trying to hide his embarrassment behind an assumed name is pretty sad. I consider it my duty to set the record straight and humiliate Jon into the bargain.

to race on (all of which bear more than a passing resemblance to the Mario Kart ones), eight different characters to race as (each with their own individual car and characteristics) and a huge arsenal of power-ups. This all adds up to a game you won't get bored of too quickly.

The wealth of options and diversity in challenge offered by Xtreme Racing is truly commendable. Unfortunately, all that good work is let down by the graphics. As clear and well presented as the options screen may be, the tracks and cars are not - Black Magic opting for speed rather than clarity. The result is big, chunky and badly pixillated cars and some really rough tracks that look like they're made out of Lego bricks. Even the ability to change the number of frames per second and the pixel size can't salvage the game. Although Xtreme Racing features some amusing little touches (like being able to squash bystanders and crush opponent's cars), the poor animation makes you want to cringe rather than laugh. The game's music and audio fares little better. Having already released the fantastic Doom clone, Gloom and a nearly finished Xtreme Racing (a blatant rip-off from Mario Kart), Black Magic could be criticised for lacking creativity. The hard and fast rule of any business is surely to supply what the public wants and right now, CD32 owners are demanding and accepting anything that comes their way. Realistically, racing games have moved on since Mario first jumped on his kart and idealistically we'd all rather be playing games like Destruction Derby, Screamer, Ridge Racer and Sega Rally. Sadly, it's not to be ... yet. For the time being, we're going to have to make do with games like this one, but hopefully, it won't continue for long. Maybe someone out there will be able to write a Destruction Derby clone that will rock the CD32 world.

Virtual Karting

We previewed OTM's latest race-'em-up a couple of issues back and were supposed to have a review last month. Still, better late than never. The first of this months brace of hi-octane racing games guaranteed to fill your nostrils with the smell of petrol. Or is that a bit optimistic?

his is no ordinary karting game. No sirree! This is Virtual Karting. But what makes it 'virtual'? It's all down to that wonderful thing known as texture mapping. With the arrival of PlayStation and Saturn this technique has really become the watchword for games production. It allows for the creation of totally believable 3D environments, something at which the PlayStation in particular excels. Just as the Doom revolution gave rise to a whole host of similar corridor-style games on CD32 like AB3D, Gloom and Death Mask. The latest fashion is fuelled by the huge success of dazzling arcade titles like Daytona USA, Sega Rally and Ridge Racer. All three have since been converted onto Saturn, Saturn and Virtual Karting marks a departure from the norm for Amiga driving games. Apart from FI Grand Prix they've always followed the Out Run-style arcade format but VK offers a more realistic if rather difficult drive.

PlayStation respectively. The PlayStation also has Psygnosis' Destruction Derby. A game written specifically for the home system which actually outstrips its more illustrious arcade contemporaries in the playability stakes. Is it any coincidence that, with such titles selling next gen consoles by the bucketload, we suddenly get Virtual Karting and XTreme Racing in for review in the same month!? I don't recall seeing a texture mapped driving game on Amiga or CD32 before so you can draw your own conclusions.

But why karts? Maybe it's cos everything else has been done. Stock cars (Daytona), Formula I (Virtua Racing) etc. Karting may sound like a bit of a poor man's motor sport but ask yourself this. Where did Schumacher, Coulthard and the vast majority of today's FI stars start out? They didn't just leap behind the wheel of a 200mph race car and start doing it. They started by racing karts and progressed through the ranks.

Prior to each race you're treated to an aerial lap of the course which is enough to scare you off straight away!

Well matey — which'll it be? Even on 100cc you'll be hard pushed to finish better than last even with practice.

Three tracks and two different karts are on offer. Beginners are recommended to start off on the easy track with a 100cc motor before attempting the medium and hard with the speedier but trickier to handle 125cc.

The most discernible way in which VK differs from other CD32 driving games is in the graphics. As I said earlier, it's all done using a technique called texture mapping. I'm sure you're all familiar with at least one Amiga 3D Driving sim. Microprose's Formula I Grand Prix aside, they all use largely the same mechanics. The rolling road with expanding trackside sprites method which came of age with Out Run but can be traced back to Atari's classic (in the old and very crusty

Here are the games three tracks for your perusal. The best strategy is to get to know the kart's handling on the easy one but even then you can't hope to complete the others by 'seat o' your pants' driving. The courses must be learned so you can anticipate bends and brake accordingly.

sense of the word) Pole Position.

For years all driving games were made this way until Virtua Racing arrived with its polygon graphics and extensive, rotatable game world. Suddenly everyone realised how unacceptable things had been up to that point. The Out Run, Chase HQ and WEC Le Mans machines became obsolete overnight. Suddenly it was Virtua this and Virtua that. The thing is, it was only a few months further down the line Daytona arrived and instantly made VR look dated and washed out.

If you've got this far and a are now expecting me to say VK looks like Daytona for the CD32, a — you obviously haven't looked at the screenshots, and b — I'm going to disappoint you. The graphics look more like mode 7 on the SNES. However the game doesn't try to replicate Mario Kart in the way XTreme Racing does. Instead it concentrates on being more of a realistic racing simulation. Something not really possible in the Out Run genre. Using this technique which allows the whole world to be rotated, the track can go wherever the programmer likes. And, more importantly, the player can see where it goes rather than it kind of building itself up in the distance as you go. Instead of being limited to sweeping bends varying only in their degrees of sharpness we've now got genuine tight hairpins, chicanes which switch back on themselves and a lot more involving driving experience as a result.

A few different viewpoints are available. An in-kart view with your feet visible as they pad the break and accelerator. A more zoomed out 3D view or, if you prefer, mode the game plays more like such oldies as Super Sprint. However not quite as well given the nature of the controls. The kart tends to be a bit slippery at the best of times. Sitting 'in the cockpit' so to speak gives you a better feel for its idiosyncrasies. The 2D view is far harder to get to grips with because of its detached perspective meaning you spend much of your time on the verge. That said, it's no piece of cake whichever way you play. Those who like a driving game where they can put their foot down and not release it until the chequered flag are in for a nasty shock. Learning to constantly break and accelerate is required to make it around the easiest of the three tracks. It'll take even longer before you can start thinking about actually winning any races. And that's just the automatic car. There's a manual-shift option but only gaming supermen need apply!

CD review /

Man on! Oops, wrong sport. Er... look behind you. Oh hang on a minute — that's one of those ruddy computer drivers. Better have the git!

Hang about - sixth gear! I've never seen one with more than two and even that was a bit of Rolls Royce when it comes gokarts. Methinks this is evidence of a lack of research. Slapped wrists, You'd think the top down view would make bends and things easier to negotiate as you can see exactly how far away they are. Not so! Playing the game this way is even tougher and believe me you don't need that!

First place with eleven seconds to go and there's the finish line. Didn't I say this was the best view to use? No. Well I'm saying it now!

Once again we find ourselves heading for the curb at... oh blimey - 83km/h! Doesn't seem like these karts offer the crashee much protection. Aaaargh!

If all else fails the old 'drive round the track the wrong way' rouse is a good way of letting off steam. Not very constructive though. Maybe this deep-seated desire to destroy comes from my upbringing. I must ask my mother.

To help you out during races rubber is laid down by the kart's tyres. This is visible as a thick black track which usefully follows the racing line. A good way for more experienced players to improve their times having mastered the basics of controlling the kart. At this point I'll just mention the other karts look excellent as you pass them. All drawn in full 3D they look solid and lifelike even if they do seem to spend a lot of time skidding sideways!

The speed and smoothness of the graphics is to be commended considering the amount of movement the CPU's having to cope with, and this is what lifts the game above the usual fodder. It's certainly offers a big challenge but you'll have to persevere to get the best out of it. Don't expect to be up and winning races within the first couple of hours, or even the first week for that matter. However if you want a good long term racing challenge to get your teeth into there's nowt better around at the moment.

A quick word of advice: don't try to take a short cut through the lake. The program isn't stupid and go-karts aren't known for their excessively buoyant nature.

D-Generation

When you come to the first computer, enter your name as SETH. Use Ostrich as your pass name until you get to the second computer, where you have to enter your name as Death. This should activate a cheat mode.

Start the game as normal, then press start to bring up the spell selection menu together with down on the joypad. This should make Flink kneel. Being careful not to let go of the start button, tap right, right, right, left, left, left, right, right, left, left, left, right, right, left on the joypad. this should bring up a cheat menu which'll allow you to skip levels.

Frontier

For extra cargo space on your ship, buy at least one tonne of rubbish and travel to a planet where you won't get caught for dumping it. Go to the cargo screen and click a bit below the rubbish. You should notice that the remaining cargo has gone up, but the amount of rubbish has stayed the same.

Heimdall 2

If you find yourself without either the hero, or the heroine, go to the Dwarven Isle of Utguard. Here, go to the shop and look in your inventory. Click on the deceased face and sell all their possesions, then (and here's the clever part) buy them back with the character who's still alive.

Liberation

For loads of dosh, enter a building and pick up as many key cards as you can find. Now go back outside and sell them for the largest sum of money offered. Once you've done this, head back inside the building and you'll find all the key cards have returned. You can pick them up and sell them as many times as you like.

Microcosm

At the start of level one, go right and then at the next crossroads push up. Then pause the game and press, in turn, the yellow, red, green and blue buttons, followed by up and down on the joypad. You should now be invincible.

Myth

Before you turn on the CD32, hold down the L and R toggles on the joypad and the blue button. Switch on the CD32 and then release the buttons when the screen flashes red, you now have infinite lives.

We're back. So what's been happening over the last four weeks, eh? Personally I've been chasing up stuff to fill this latest issue, not that people have been falling over themselves to be helpful. So many people seem to just let things drift. We haven't had the expected torrent of observations on the page-drop as yet which I was half expecting. Actually it's come as quite a pleasant surprise to see people preferring to make constructive comments and suggestions towards the greater good of the market than pick up on things which are afterall, beyond the control of humble servants such as I. If it was up to me we'd have 300 pages and at least 50 Gamer Gold reviews a month but as you know that's not entirely possible given things as they stand. I always said we had a smarter readership than the average computer rag!

ear CD32 I haven't written to a magazine before, but I have been reading it since day one. Let's get down to business, I have some info about the MPEG cart. The cart I am talking about is a new one from Hisoft, which is called Squirrel MPEG. Not to be confused with the Squirrel SCSI unit and it will be linked up to a TV, or monitor, plus it will come with its own remote control.

I have some questions about Aminet 7. Why is it everytime I try to load up a file it says failed to return code I0 and unable to open your tool. I also got the CD network and cable and it's worth it, if you get a CD32 and another Amiga. Is their a programme which will turn the two machines into an SX-I compatible unit, so I can run Floppy software? Also, what happened to Rebel Assault? We were promised it since issue 2, so where is it? Also, how about a Penpals section and live games reviews on your cover CD?

See you next Disc.. P.S How about a job?

Wooah! Slow down there! Just what the hell are you going on about. Okay, so you've written in to tell us about the Squirrel MPEG cart, so? What's your point? Hmmm!

As for your problem with Aminet 7 'Disc', well, to be honest, I ain't got any idea what you're drivelling about - I doubt anybody has. If somebody can decipher your drivellous rantings though, I'd appreciate it if they wrote in and let us know.

In case you're still wondering about Rebel Assault, its been put on permanent hold, like a lot of other games and about the job, we'll phone you, don't phone us!

ear Gamer That's OK! We're all a great family, long live the CD32, what a loyal readership we have ... that's all good stuff for romantic people like me and you, but now just be a little more pragmatic. I paid a lot of money to support your CD32 Gamer project; I like to think that I am more then just a mere reader. I feel that the magazine is a bit 'mine'. I don't want any PC, PSX, Saturn, Mars, Jupiter; I am tired of BORING games (ever tried the Playstation?) This is what I want:

- I) Playability and correct use of technology (AKIKO, Blitter, CD tracks, decent presentation, Hardware scrolling ...)
- 2) Some RESPECT, please! Sometimes I think that many programmers enjoy laughing at Amiga owners. Hey lads, DON'T BUY their rubbish!

I know that this is a hard time, but please keep the scores low if games are bad. Super Street Fighter II is simply crap. I really prefer not to play, rather than playing it! Be severe as much as you can. Let's hope Gametek will do a better game.

Hey, now some technical stuff: 3D games are difficult on the Amiga because we use a Planar graphic mode which is slower for 3D, whilst PC's (or Amiga graphical boards) have chunky mode (I byte for each pixel) which is fast, although it does have a few disadvantages. So, what can we do? Our co-processors include a chunky-t0-Choppy mode; it is a solution (used in Gloom), but pixels are 2-2 and you can't use a full screen window. Another solution is the Chunky-to-Planar software routine, but you need a fast processor to reach a decent speed. But, wait, I see a brave Knight in the distance: AKIKO! This valorous fighter implements Chunky-to-Planar conversion by hardware. A very good and simple solution, but will anyone use it? No, it's too simple. Are EScom supporting AKIKO? No way, my friends. Only CD32 has it, so why should the programmers work hard to make wonderful, silky smooth 3D graphic enhancements, like AKIKO, or a new one, with the Playstation at £300.

I know that usually our games are very playable, but I also know they could certainly be smart looking. Sorry mates, I'm really furious about that.

Just another thing boys, I am your supporter, OK, not just a reader, but now let's do something for your cover CD because there's nothing on it! If you have mastering problems, at least put the demos on the next issue. There are only a few games around, if I can't see them on your CD, what the hell do you put a CD on the cover for? I don't want to think it is just an economic trick to suck our money, so come on.

I own a 6 button JOYSTICK (yes, not a pad), which is made in Italy (Rome): it is called Millenium. I had a few problems with it (because it is fragile, although it is made of steel, and is difficult to open), but it is still the only choice if you don't like joypads. Now, after a few changes, it's nearly perfect.

Here's my collection of CD32 games (why not have a special feature on readers collections?); Oscar, Diggers, Cannon Fodder, Beneath a Steel Sky, Ultimate BOdy Blows, Alien Breed, Qwak, Banshee, Guardian, Roadkill, Gloom, Shadow Fighter, International Sensible Soccer, Super Stardust, Sometimes I also borrow my friends; Litil Divil, Tower Assault, UFO, Flink, Theme Park, Subwar 2050, All Terrain Racing, Microcosm, Rise of the Robots and Pinball Fantasies.

Sincerely - Roberto Comunilleo - Verona P.S I have played thousands of games since C64 time. Show must go on ...

Thanks for the long, long, long letter Roberto, it's nice to hear from our fellow European gamers every now and then. It's equally reassuring to hear your faith in the CD32 is still strong - after all, no-one could be blamed for wanting to jump ship! As for all the points you made, well I can't be arsed to go into them in detail, let's just say they've been taken on board by the whole ACG team and we'll see where things go from there.

ello over there. I am a happy CD32 owner. Very Happy. Mainly because of the cheap games, but also the quality of games has something to do with it.

Before I really get started I will present myself. I am a 15 year old boy from Denmark and I have been a CD32 owner for 2 years at spring and I promise I have never been more pleased with my CD32 than now. Why? Because things are at last beginning to look good. Anyway, I have a lot of advises for you, so here they come.

First of all there are some great games that you have not reviewed yet. I am talking about trivial pursuit, Brutal Paws of Fury, Power Pinball, Humans I and 2, Prey, Amiga American Football and last, but not least, Pshyko Killer. Pshyko Killer is an interactive movie which all the CD32 owners have been waiting for. All it needs is a mouse. All the games I have named can be bought at Capri CD Distribution. I have called them.

Secondly I think 'Special Reserve is a great club and every CD32 owner should be a member. The prices are so low that you almost can not imagine. This month I bought 'Core compilation Vol. 2' for just £20 and since then the price has dropped another £5. I also bought Zool, Morph and James Pond 2 for around £4 apiece. Now that is what I call cheap games.

You should also review the 2 Core Compilations, please!

The reason why I bought a CD32 was because of the claimed low prices on games and this has been showed to be true. I am very excited about Gametek's new SSF2 Turbo and Brutal Paws of Furry, so make some reviews fast.

What actually happened to Boo and Big Red Adventure? I think, and a lot of other CD32 owners agree, that you should give Microprose and Core a call.

In an advertisement in issue 16 there was Speedball 3D and Syndicate 2 for sale, give them a call too.

Come on, review insight Tekno and Guiness disc of Records I and 2.

I think the game makers do not use the CD-ROM good enough. Just look at Heimdall 2. This excellent game would have been Perfect if the programmers had included some speech instead of boring text. This would have given the game the final tough like Simon the Sorcerer. And again with Universe Core fails. Take a look at Insight Dinosaur, this program really pushes the machine and is brilliant. Anyway the future looks good with hopefully Simon 2, Mega Race, Lost Eden and Virtual Karting coming in the near future.

Another thing you ought to do is call Escom and force them to sign contracts with software companies to produce games for the Amiga, because I think they have a responsibility towards us.

Awhile back, when you previewed Fears, Derek Dela Fuente said that the CD32 version was unchanged. Why? Call Manyk if you have to!

And call Renegade and tell them a lot of CD32 owners are waiting for them to release Flight of the Amazon Queen. With full speech of course. Give Mindscape a kick up the butt as well, so they release Baldy.

That is all for now. Goodbye and thanks for a great looking new mag.

Thorsten Ottosen - Farso, Denmark

P.S Why not make a CD32 v's SNES for a second time when you review SSF2 Turbo? Is there an intro to Worms?

CD32 Gamer has really gone continental this issue, with yet another letter from abroad (puts all you British readers to shame, doesn't it?). And, more importantly, it's from yet another happy customer (I always though the Danish were mad).

I'm glad to hear you've never been happier with your CD32 Thorsten and you're right, in a games world which has lost all sight of reason when it comes to pricing, it's nice to know that CD32 games still command realistic price tags.

Now, about those games you mentioned. We're aware we haven't reviewed them before, it's just some of them are so old we didn't think it would be worth doing them. However, if people would still like to see them reviewed, then we'll see what we can sort out for next month.

ear CD32 Gamer
I know I have found the custom Levels for Worms. All you have to do to get them, is this:
I) Go to the game Start

- 2) Pick anything you want
- 3) Then pick your team and click on OK
- 4) When the levels are loading, press the blue button to bring up the landscape generator and type in a choice of; Worms, Team 17, Rushmore and Ocean. When you have typed one, press the green button and it should load whichever you have chosen.

I hope this helps Steven 'Jem' Brown AKA - The Games Master - Glasgow

Cheers for this little gem of a cheat Jem. Worms is a cool game and I'm sure the readers will appreciate your top tip. Normally, we would have put this on the busters page, but letters and tips aren't exactly flooding in at the moment, so we've decided to run the two concurrently.

SUPER LEAGUE MANAGER

• Audiogenic
The best, and the only, footy management game on CD32. Simple and attractive interface promotes ease of use, plus neat match sequence to boot.

ACG Rated 90% (Issue II

90% (Issue 11)

SUPERLOOPZ • Audiogenic

Remember Pipemania? An addictive puzzler - easy to get into, and an excellent two-player mode.

ACG Rated 82% (Issue II)

SUPER METHANE BROTHERS• Apache Software

Great two-player action in this slick, noisy Bubble Bobble variant, but lack of variety and passwords means this can pall in one-player mode.

ACG Rated 83% (Issue 3)

SUPER PUTTY • System 3

An entertaining and original platformer, and one of the better early CD32 releases.

ACG Rated 70% (N/A)

Rip-roaring racerama with splendid 3D sprites and tough as a rugby team. Girly wuss-bags need not apply!

ACG Rated 92% (Issue II)

(Issue 11)

SUPER STARDUST • Team 17
Okay, it's basically Asteroids, but the gameplay is tight, powered-up and highly addictive with superlative graphics, especially in the amazing tunnel sections.

ACG Rated 90% (Issue 5)

SUPER STREET FIGHTER 2 TURBO

The 'turbo' version features bigger sprites, more deailed backdrops and some dramatic super finishing moves but doesn't play as fluidly as US Gold's SSF2. Issue 19 ACG Rated 94%

SYNDICATE • Mindscape

Top quality marriage of the strategy of Populous, the action of Cannon Fodder and a whole lot of blood and gore of its own.

ACG Rated 93% (Issue 13)

THE CLUE • Neo

A fun graphic adventure with a nice original theme. Worth a look for those of a criminal persuasion.

ACG Rated 80% (Issue I0)

THE LOST VIKINGS • Interplay

One of the best games around, and a great mix of arcade action and tantalising puzzles. Great fun, even though unenhanced for CD32, and bound to keep you entertained for ages.

ACG Rated 90% (Issue I)

THE SEVEN GATES OF JAMBALA

A dreadful platformer which looks like an 8bit game and plays even worse. Worth buying our back Issue I just to laugh.

ACG Rated 8% (Issue I)

THOMAS PINBALL Alternative Software

A cutesy pinball game that has buckets of appeal for kids, but adults will find the gameplay too simplistic for lasting enjoyment. ACG Rated

TOP GEAR 2 • Gremlin

The Lotus game engine is reused one more time. Faster & slicker than before, but the tracks are monotonous, car handling uninvolving and the music awful.

ACG Rated 75% (Issue 4)

TOTAL CARNAGE • Ice

A classic coin-op almost totally ruined by sluggish movement, poor colliision detection and a lousy control system. Truly awful.

ACG Rated 45% (Issue 2)

TOWER ASSAULT • Team 17

The follow-up to Alien Breed 2 is everything that game should have been - and appear in a long time. ACG Rated (Issue 7)

TOWER OF SOULS • Black Legend
The compelling fusion of fantasy role-playing and action packed arcade combat makes Tower of Souls one of the most exciting releases to come out on the CD32 this year. Having already won over the Amiga press, it arrives amid high expectations on the CD32.

ACG Rated 84% (Issue 16)

TROLLS • Flair Software

A cutesy platformer with 14 different levels. Reasonable fun, but not up there with the best CD32 platformers, and strictly for young 'uns only.

ACG Rated 67% (Issue I)

TURBO TRAX

Kompart

Sssmokin top down race-'em-up taking loads of landscapes from arctic to desert. The super smooth scrolling is a delight to behold, but it's tough!

ACG Rated 90% (Issue 15)

UFO — ENEMY UNKNOWN • Microprose

A good conversion let down by irksome controls. If you can ignore these, then it's a challenging treat. ACG Rated 80% (Issue 6)

ULTIMATE BODY BLOWS • Team 17

A humongous beat-'em-up with 23 characters, numerous combat moves and incredible addictiveness, plus a great knockout bout.

ACG Rated 93% (Issue 2)

UNIVERSE • Core Design

A prosaic adventure lifted by an epic storyline, stylish graphics and classy music.

ACG Rated 88% 88% (Issue 5)

VITAL LIGHT • Millenium
Odd hybrid of Space Invaders and Tetris, this is a high-level reaction test, but gameplay is repetitive.

ACG Rated

GAME

81% (Issue 6)

WEMBLEY INTERNATIONAL SOCCER

• Audiogenic
Despite a wealth of play options and a choice of view options, this falls down on poor joypad

ACG Rated 76% (Issue 3)

WHALE'S VOYAGE • Flair Software

A great intro track and lots of depth make this an intriguing RPG, but weak graphics diminish the $\,$ game.

ACG Rated 80% (Issue I)

WHIZZ • Flair

Surreal isometric platform adventure with some slick visuals. Anyone remember Head over Heels?

ACG Rated 92% (Issue 10)

WILD CUP SOCCER • Millennium

Sure, it looks gorgeous, but this ultraviolent sports sim has minimal gameplay.
65% (Issue 5)

WING COMMANDER • Electronic Arts
The classic space opera is slickly presented with an involving storyline, even if gameplay isn't as sophisticated as you first think. Getting on a bit though.

ACG Rated

86% (Issue I)

XENON 2 • Bitmap

The Bitmap Brothers at their best. Classic blasting action that will have you reaching for the Deep Heat rub to calm your sore joypad hand. Superb graphics, stunning playability and a good music score to boot.

ACG Rated 88% (Issue 16)

ZOOL • Gremlin

Masses of onscreen colour, a great intro and impressive soundtracks. Shame the gameplay's so limited.

ACG Rated 60% (Issue I)

ZOOL 2 • Gremlin Graphics
Slick presentation, good CD tracks and impressive graphics, but gameplay lacks zest.
ACG Rated 70% (Issue 2)
